

From Words to Action: Rethinking Justice in a Globalised World

29-30 May 2024, University of Edinburgh (In Person)

Call for Papers: Oral and Poster Presentations

Globalisation is not a recent phenomenon, but it is continuously evolving, manifesting itself anew daily. As a consequence of this ongoing evolution, globalisation is resurfacing within legal domains that notably intersect with our lives, specifically within the realms of governance, economy, healthcare, environment, and technology. These areas are not only distinct but intricately connected to the field of law, where globalisation manifests its influence. In an era marked by unprecedented global interconnectedness, the concept of justice is undergoing a transformative reevaluation. At this juncture, Edinburgh Post Graduate Law Conference (EPLC) 2024 aims to address the challenges related to practical applications in currently regulated areas besides emphasise the need for a broad perspective that includes areas not regulated yet, falling behind the trends of globalisation and development, under this year's conference theme, "From Words to Action: Rethinking Justice in a Globalised World".

EPLC 2024 invites postgraduate students, early career researchers and legal practitioners from any legal discipline to engage in and contribute to a comprehensive exploration of the challenges inherent in the evolving landscape of global justice. We encourage submissions that critically examine the themes in various legal areas, including but not limited to:

International Law
Human Rights Law
Environment Law
Legal Theory and Legal History
Criminal Law and Criminology
EU Law

Commercial Law
IP, Media and Technology Law
Constitutional Law
Medical Law
Family Law
Immigration Law
